About Tregurrian

The site is situated on the headland between the beautiful bays of Mawgan Porth and Watergate Bay.

The beach at Watergate Bay can be accessed via the Southwest coastal path in approximately 15 – 20 minutes, this is generally easy to negotiate but it is steep in places with steps and so not suitable for ambulatory devices or push chairs.

The local bus service, however, stops in Tregurrian village, (a short gently sloping 250m walk from site). This goes to and from Watergate Bay, Mawgan Porth, Newquay and Padstow. The service stops at ~ 5:00pm.

In both Watergate Bay and Mawgan Porth there are car parks which are Motorhome accessible.

Newquay is a short 10-minute drive away to most of the major supermarkets again generally with reasonable access for Motorhomes.

Your Arrival on Site

The site is best accessed via the airport road, (turn left at the T-junction after the airport entrance) not from Newquay along the coast road. The nearest train station is 4 miles from site. The nearest bus stop is 250m from site.

The site is on a single-track road just after the Watergate Bay Touring Park. There is a triangular, blind junction before Tregurrian village which has a sign directing you to the access lane.

The site is on two different sides of the lane. On arrival head to the side with the stand-alone Welcome sign and large reception building, there is a white line on the floor and stop sign indicating where to pull up. It is level tarmac.

There are two keypad operated barriers that are automatic on exit, locked between 11pm and 7am.

Instructions are on the door for arrivals after 8pm.
