Planning your journey

You need to think carefully about the best itinerary for your whole journey abroad. Once you have chosen your main destination/s, ferry crossings and your routes between, you need to think about overnight site stops. To help you plan your route and journey times, we have included a map and mileage chart on the inside foldout covers of this brochure. Remember the shorter daylight hours, the possibility of inclement weather, and also the time zones. France and Spain are an hour ahead of the UK. Portugal is on the same time as the UK, so you go back an hour as you travel from Spain to Portugal and go forward an hour from Portugal to Spain.

How far each day?

The Club recommends planning to drive no more than 250 to 300 miles in a day, and taking a break every two hours. Speed limits for motorhomes and cars towing abroad (see pages 64-83) can be lower than in the UK, so journey times may be longer. Refer also to Carefree's European Driver's Handbook for further country by country details. As a broad rule of thumb, from a morning ferry arrival in northern Spain, allow one overnight stop for the eastern Mediterranean sites (down to and including La Manga) and two overnight stops for the other destinations.

Choosing your overnight stops

From October until Easter most sites close, and some that hope to be open unexpectedly close for a variety of reasons. When travelling it can be difficult to find suitable stopover sites close to your route. To help you safely and securely along your way, Carefree's knowlegeable sites team has sourced conveniently located sites in France and Spain, that we can pre-book for you as En Route campsites. These appear on the following pages. They guarantee to be open for members who pre-book through Carefree. You may often find other Club members on site at the same time.

These En Route sites have at least some basic facilities open and are at least suitable for one night stays. Many have a basic shop and somewhere to obtain a meal, either on site or nearby. Some are fully functioning sites in their own right. For your own convenience please try to arrive before dark. The Club does not recommend stopping overnight in lay-bys or service stations, whether on motorways or on other roads.

Places to enjoy – En Route Plus 🗘

For many people, it's not where you go, but how you get there. Several of the En Route sites we use are close to places of interest and/or of better quality than just a basic stopover, so we think that they warrant more than just an overnight stop.
